

J. Clarke Price, CAE, is president and CEO of The Ohio Society of CPAs. The Ohio Society has 22,000 members and is the fifth largest of the state organizations serving CPAs in the United States. During his 38-year career with The Ohio Society of CPAs, Price has worked in virtually all areas of the Society's operation, including public relations, governmental relations and marketing. He became CEO in 1990. For ten years, Accounting Today magazine has recognized Price as one of the "100 most influential people in the accounting profession in the United States." During 1999 Accounting Technology magazine named him one of nine "technology superstars in the CPA profession." Price has been an active participant in the activities of the AICPA and is a former chairman of two AICPA committees - the Accountants Legal Liability Committee and the Accounting Careers Committee. He holds the distinction of being the first non-CPA to chair an AICPA committee. His record of contributions to the CPA profession and AICPA was recognized in 2001 when he received the AICPA Distinguished Service Award. Price is a member of the Franklin University Board of Trustees and The Ohio State University Accounting Advisory Board. He is a former member of the Kent State University Business Advisory Council. Before joining The Ohio Society of CPAs, Price was an account executive with a Philadelphia-based advertising agency where he concentrated on clients in the resort and sporting goods industries. Price also served on active duty in the U.S. Army as a public information specialist for the First Army in New York City.

February 2011